While files from the Internet can be useful, some files can potentially harm your computer. If you do not trust the source, do not open or save this file. What's the risk?

- c. Save the file to a folder on your C: drive (or wherever you can easily find it).
- d. Open the text file, and position the cursor at the beginning of the first line.
- e. Press ENTER to start a new line.
- f. Position the cursor at the beginning of the new blank line.
- g. Continue at step number 5 on page 3.

If you don't already have a playlist file:

- a. Open Notepad.
- b. Save the file as "yourname.txt".
- c. Position the cursor at the beginning of the first line.
- d. Continue at step number 5 on page 3.

NOTE: This is the first post that most people created (if they chose to do so), when they first joined the BossBr.net site.

- 5. Paste the path (that you copied in step number 3) at the beginning of the blank line in your playlist text file.
- 6. Position the cursor at the end of the path text, and type a pipe () symbol (this symbol is usually located above the ENTER key), and then type your description text.

Your text file should look similar to the image below.

Posts: 181	I've had a BR600 for a couple years now and I mostly use it for practicing goitar late at night (so I don't keep the kids up).
	I am going to post an original song called "2DaysGone" in the MP3 section if anyone is interested in checking it out.
Now I'm worried.	It was done with one guitar plugged directly into the BR600.
